Enough Is Enough A Woman's Struggle with Abuse AuthorHouse ENOUGH IS ENOUGH is the inspiring, provocative, and incredible true story of the author's turbulent life and her relentless struggle for freedom and survival amid parental and spousal abuse. A virgin at seventeen, she falls in love for the first time with an older man. Desperate to escape her parents' cruelty, his marriage proposal seems like a God-send, but her misfortune only increases when he deceives her, rapes her, mistreats her, and forces her to elope with him, despite his marriage and two children. Denounced and disowned by her parents and family, she endures a life of physical, mental and sexual abuse, humiliation, fear, and poverty, as she continues in her struggle. All her attempts to escape fail. But just when she has a perfect plan, she becomes pregnant. Now she wonders if she deserves her fate as punishment for her mistakes, but knows she must change it, for her own sake and her beloved daughter's. On the brink of insanity and suicide, she begs the Almighty for strength and courage to cope with her adversities. Left with no family, no friends, no money, and no love, she battles eight long, hard years under her oppressor's tyrannical rule, until.

Enough Is Enough A Woman's Struggle with Abuse This book is the extended outcome of an argument between the author and his Rabbi. The latter insisted that the morals in the Talmud represented the best basis of human behavior while the author argued that no document written five thousand years ago could reflect the knowledge acquired in that 5000 years, particularly the scientific advancements of the last 300 years. After several inconclusive continuations of these different viewpoints, Rabbi Galpert suggested I write him a sermon reflecting my viewpoints. "But don't make it more than thirty minutes." Since my education was that of a mechanical, and later a nuclear engineer, I reviewed many modern books on evolution, psychology, anthropology and sociobiology. Then one night I conceived the following approach: A basic assumption: The most important thing in life is life itself. And the axiom: What our ancestors did that resulted in our being here, were the right things for us to do. So all I had to do was list the things they must have done so that I am here. Skipping the extensive definitions of terms used, the absence of absolutes, the scientific method, but including the origin and the strong role of religion, I came up with the following primordial laws (PLs). Do what is necessary to stay alive. Consenting safe sexual activity is healthy, but any progeny must be nurtured until they are able to be self supporting. Cooperate with and do no harm to others. Do your own thing, but remember the above. Value intelligence above strength and speed. Speak up and give others the benefit of your thoughts. Adapt to changes in physical and societal environments. You are free to go where the grass is greener. The things you make by your own efforts are yours. Public property is for everyone's benefit and must not be damaged. All of the above PLs are treated in detail in the book. We also look to the future. The method of applying hierarchical order of these PLs is illustrated. The treatment of exceptions shows the difference between scientific and religious considerations. The reader is encouraged to his/her reaction to this book with additions, changes and suggestions. By offering their stories, Teresa Gil sheds light on the challenges of mothering after childhood sexual abuse. Sexual Abuse in the Lives of Women Diagnosed with Serious Mental Illness Routledge Although a substantial amount of media and professional attention has been devoted to the incidence of sexual abuse in the population at large, the plight of those who have suffered abuse and are seriously mentally ill has largely been ignored. Adding to the existing literature on trauma, this book exposes the prevalence of physical and emotional abuse among severely mentally ill patients, and includes case studies that reveal its tragic and devastating impact. Offering chapters on theory and assessment of abused women, this book explores services that are available to them, discusses treatment (including inpatient and cognitive-behavioral approaches), and addresses recommendations for the improvement of both policy and research. Women and Justice Rowman & Littlefield Publishers Understanding the contemporary place of women's lives requires an understanding of the historical legacies. Utilizing a sociological and feminist lens, Women and Justice examines what justice has meant in the lives of women. The book includes diverse quotes relating to the notion of justice and examines numerous issues both civil and criminal to bring a broader understanding. As the only sociolegal text on the market that attempts to include both civil and criminal issues between two covers, the work is framed by the working term 'quadraplexation' a term grounded in the work of feminist theorist Juliet Mitchell. This framework helps us to better understand how and why women are treated the way they are in contemporary society, and it helps to frame our understanding of the historical legal decision-making process. Motherhood, marriage and same-sex coupling, paid and unpaid labor, education, criminal behavior, and women practitioners' lives in the justice system are among the topics included in the text. Suggestions for creating a more just world for women are also included. Rebuilding Lives after Domestic Violence Understanding Long-Term Outcomes Jessica Kingsley Publishers Rebuilding Lives after Domestic Violence examines in-depth the long-term outcomes for women who have suffered domestic violence and abuse, based on interviews conducted over seven years. Through these interviews the author reveals the factors which help or hinder a successful transition from abusive relationship to independent living. The women interviewed provide an insight into the lengthy and difficult process of rebuilding their lives, and offer messages and advice to those working with women who have endured similar experiences. The author examines issues the women commonly face such as finding safe and independent accommodation, building practical and emotional support systems and relationships, and issues surrounding their children. She also discusses service provision and draws together the factors that contribute to a successful and independent life. This unique book will be essential reading for all those involved in working with women who have experienced domestic violence and abuse as well as those responsible for service provision and policy development. Coercive Control The Entrapment of Women in Personal Life Oxford University Press Drawing on cases, Stark identifies the problems with our current approach to domestic violence, outlines the components of coercive control, and then uses this alternate framework to analyse the cases of battered women charged with criminal offenses directed at their abusers. Eve's Pilgrimage A Woman's Quest for the City of God A&C Black In this original book, the author journeys through Rome, following biblical events and themes in works of art: from Genesis in the Sistine Chapel, through Incarnation in the Pantheon and Resurrection in Michaelangelo's Last Judgement. She touches on many themes in her journey, including violence and power (at the Colosseum), social injustice (at St. Mary Major) and motherhood (at the icon of Our Lady in Perpetual Succour). Writing as an intelligent Christian feminist, Beattie doesn't resort to clichés, and has a clear, elegant style which makes this a very readable book. Domestic Violence in Hollywood Film Gaslighting Springer This is the first book to critically examine Hollywood films that focus on male partner violence against women. These films include Gaslight, Sleeping with the Enemy, What's Love Got to Do with It, Dolores Claiborne, Enough, and Safe Haven. Shaped by the contexts of postfeminism, domestic abuse post-awareness, and familiar genre conventions, these films engage in ideological "gaslighting" that reaffirms our preconceived ideas about men as abusers, women as victims, and the racial and class politics of domestic violence. While the films purport to condemn abuse and empower abused women, this study proposes that they tacitly reinforce the very attitudes that we believe we no longer tolerate. Shoos argues that films like these limit not only popular understanding but also social and institutional interventions. Violence and Abuse Issues Cross-Cultural Perspectives for Health and Social Services Routledge After centuries of being considered a private matter in most societies, violence and its profound effect on the physical health, mental health, and social well-being of victims and their families, as well as on the assailants themselves, has started to take centre stage as a public issue of worldwide concern. This comprehensive textbook presents theoretical background and practical strategies for doing so, providing a solid knowledge base for good practice in this area. It emphasizes the interdisciplinary aspects of violence and victim/survivor care and addresses violence over the lifespan, covering: child sexual and physical abuse sexual assault of adults battering and emotional abuse of intimate partners elder abuse perpetrators of violence and abuse violence in learning and work environments vicarious trauma and self-care interconnections between various forms of violence, including socially approved violence in the media and in war. Adopting an international perspective, this book looks at the ways in which violence, abuse and oppression can be clearly associated with power imbalances which are often gendered and which are covertly or overtly manifested at a range of levels including the interpersonal as well as the organizational and the political. It explores debates and challenges with regard to theoretical orientations, policy frameworks and how power imbalances intersect with a range of influencing factors including gender, poverty, indigenous/ethnic issues, class and sexuality. Examining the implications for human service professionals, each chapter of Addressing Violence, Abuse and Oppression provides an historical overview, explores theoretical perspectives, examines specific policy and practice context, appraises the contribution from research and assesses the impact for individuals and groups. Teaching Women's Studies in Conservative Contexts Considering Perspectives for an Inclusive Dialogue Routledge Women's Studies is a field that inspires strong reactions, both positive and negative, inside and outside of the classroom. The field, partly due to its activist origins, is often associated with liberal ideology and is therefore chided by students and others who identify as conservative. The goal of this book is to introduce conservative perspectives into the issues of gender, sexuality, race, and power that are topics of teaching and discussion in women's studies courses. The book also aims to provide examples of pathways by which conservative students and scholars can engage the field of women's studies, not as opponents, but as contributors. Contributors including administrators, activists, scholar-teachers, artists, and ministers come together in this collection to engage in writing and response and to add their approaches to teaching and administering women's studies on their campuses. Violence Against Women and Children A Christian Theological Sourcebook A&C Black Violence against women and children has reached epidemic proportions. It cuts across all economic strata and is found in our urban centers and the farthest corners of the nation. This is the only sourcebook on domestic violence for clergy and counselors. Domestic Violence in Diverse Contexts A Re-examination of Gender Routledge Overwhelmingly, it is women who are the victims of domestic violence and this book puts women's experiences of domestic violence at its centre, whilst acknowledging their many diverse and complex identities. Concentrating on the various forms of domestic abuse and its occurrence and manifestations within different contexts, it argues that gender is centrally implicated in the unique factors that shape violence across all these areas. Individual chapters outline the experiences of: Mothers Older women Women with religious affiliations Refugee women Rural women Aboriginal women Women in same-sex relationships Women with intellectual disabilities. Exploring how domestic violence across varying contexts impacts on different women's experiences and understandings of abuse, this innovative work draws on post-structural feminist theory and how these ideas view, and potentially allow, gendered explanations of domestic violence. Domestic Violence in Diverse Contexts is suitable for academics and researchers interested in issues around violence and gender. WOMANDLA! Women Power! In their path-breaking anthology Gender Violence: Interdisciplinary Perspectives, editors Laura L. O'Toole and Jessica Schiffman have brought together central articles and authors to construct a remarkably broad understanding of the gender-related manifestations of violence. Gender Violence is composed of three sections—one examining the roots of male violence and victimization of women, another exploring forms of sexual coercion and violence, and a third offering a number of perspectives on promoting nonviolence in the context of gender relations. Chapters consider topics including sexual harassment, rape, children and gender violence, battering in intimate relationships, and pornography. The list of contributors includes such diverse and well known scholars as Friedrich Engels, bell hooks, Diana Scully, Harry Brod, and Linda Gordon, and poets such as Audre Lorde and Margaret Randall. The book also contains a number of original pieces with novel approaches to subjects such as domestic violence and its effects on children. Women's Empowerment for Sustainability in Africa Cambridge Scholars Publishing This book uses an open, explorative approach to deal with the different aspects of gender discrimination and gender empowerment policies, as well as their impact on economic development and capacity-building in several African countries. It uses primary and secondary data to present the argument that, without the full input of women, sustainable development will not be achieved in many African countries. This book is the first text written by knowledgeable gender issue experts that understand the culture of, and lived and conducted research in, Africa. It provides many examples of the relationships between gender and economic development around the African continent, highlighting different processes and practices. As such, the contributors here illustrate the impact of weak gender policies, and the ability to adequately develop female capacity building that could lead to wide-spread sustainable economic growth in Africa. They also explore a wide range of new dimensions and variables that are commonly ignored by other text books on gender equality. The book will help graduate, undergraduate students and other readers to understand women's policies in the past, present, and future by analysing and illustrating cultural, political and socio-historical contexts which have shaped women's role in the economic and sustainable development of Africa. 'Going Public' three chapters on how violence was regulated by law and the professional agencies which were set up to deal with it. 'Perceptions and Representations' this final section looks at how violence was written about, using both fiction and non-fiction sources. Throughout the book the recurring themes of gender, class, continuity and change, public/private, and experience, discourses and representations are highlighted.
