Commerce Business Daily Commerce Business Daily (CBDNet). Presents CBDNet, the official free listing of U.S. Government contracting opportunities that are published in the "Commerce Business Daily (CBD)" Explains that the CBD lists notices of proposed government procurement actions, contract awards, sales of government property, and other procurement information every business day. Notes that CBDNet is provided through an alliance of the U.S. Department of Commerce and the U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO). Provides information about the CBD, subscriptions, and classification codes. Offers access to the CBDNet, the CBD online database, via browsing or by the use of a search engine. Commerce Business Daily Classification of Procurement Notices : Briefing Report to the Chairman, Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate Commerce Business Daily Classification of Procurement Notices BiblioGov Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO reviewed 2,413 procurement notice synopses in 4 editions of the Commerce Business Daily (CBD) to determine the extent to which contracting agencies misclassified the synopses into the wrong categories of supplies and services. GAO found that contracting officials: (1) misclassified 137 of the 2,413 procurement notices, including 106 of 963 service and 31 of 1,450 supply synopses; (2) assigned a miscellaneous services code to 43 of 137 misclassified synopses; (3) appeared to misclassify an additional 45 synopses, on the basis of Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) guidance; and (4) were not always aware of traditional classifications not noted in FAR guidance. GAO also found that: (1) the Department of Commerce withdrew CBD editorial staff authority to change incorrect codes in September 1988, citing contracting official responsibility for code accuracy; (2) misclassified synopses could violate requirements for obtaining full and open competition; (3) Commerce believed that interested parties could avoid misclassification problems by working with firms that purchased CBD in electronic form to help potential bidders to locate relevant procurement information; (4) Commerce issued guidance to contracting officers for assigning classification codes; (5) CBD staff occasionally advised contracting officers about incorrect classification codes; and (6) Commerce has proposed replacing the present FAR classification codes with the more descriptive and detailed Federal Procurement Data System product and service codes. The JIST3 web site is located at <http://ics.mil>. It is maintained by the Defense Department's Joint Program Office for Test and Evaluation (JPO(T&E)) at Andrews AFB, Maryland. One of the JIST3 services is an information tool known as the Facility and Capability Information for Test and Training (FACITT). FACITT uses a natural language search engine to canvass sites of importance to the JIST3 communities and return results concerning government owned and operated facilities and capabilities in the areas of Science and Technology (S&T), Test and Evaluation (T&E), Modeling and Simulation (M&S) and training. During the developmental stages of FACITT, emphasis was placed on including DoD and other government sites. An initiative is now underway to include an inventory of commercial sites of interest to the JIST3 communities within FACITT. Such sites will be listed as a specialized search library within FACITT. In such fashion a researcher may choose to isolate commercial capabilities or to include them as appropriate with other relevant search categories. This announcement seeks the Universal Resource Locators (URL) for specific commercial, industrial or private entities that support web sites that deal specifically in topics of interest to the JIST3 community. Such sites may deal with commercially available research and development laboratories, test facilities, test tools, test methodologies, training tools, distance learning tools, ranges, instrumentation, modeling and simulation, relevant intellectual capital or other resources of immediate value to the Defense Department test and training communities.
